

AMTRAK RETURNS TO UNION STATION ON FEBRUARY 28, 2014

After being temporarily relocated, Amtrak will move back to Union Station located at 1701 Wynkoop St. (17th and Wynkoop) on February 28, 2014.

Construction is still underway at Union Station, and until it is completed, passengers can access the waiting room, ticketing and baggage office by following signs to the trackside of the building at the south end. From there, passengers will follow signs to the newly constructed passenger platform, under the large white canopy. When construction is completed in July, passengers will access the Amtrak facility from the front of the building. Note: The stop for Amtrak Thruway buses will be temporarily located on Wynkoop Street, across from Union Station and marked with signage.

SAFETY ADVISORY DURING CONSTRUCTION

Construction of a new commuter rail station is currently underway at historic Denver Union Station. This work is not expected to affect Amtrak passengers or station operations. The renovation projected will be complete by late 2014. During the construction period, please be mindful of the following:

- Be careful as you walk near the construction area.
- Stay at a safe distance from machinery and moving construction equipment.
- Watch out for any tripping hazards, such as construction debris or uneven surfaces.

PARKING NEAR UNION STATION

Although there is no passenger parking at the new location, there are numerous long and short-term parking lots and garages around Union Station.
