

DUS News Digest

October 22, 2010 to October 29, 2010

Denver Union Station Update #40.....	2
October 25, 2010 Denver Infill Blog
Denver Union Station Walking Tour This Saturday.....	4
October 28, 2010 Denver Infill Blog

October 25, 2010

By Rick Anstey, Denver Infill Blog

Bus terminal walls are nearing completion. The photo below shows the remaining portion of wall that is still under construction.

More recycled canopies are being put to use. In the center of the next photo is a canopy that has been installed over the eventual passenger platform at the temporary Amtrak terminal. You can see some of the 20th Street HOV lane overhead. Since I took the photo, another canopy has been placed.

When the project is finished, you won't see much of what makes the place run. While it's out in the open, here's a sample of utility work that has been a major part of the project.

Union Station Walking Tour This Saturday

Page 4

October 28, 2010

By Ken Schroepel, Denver Infill Blog

Your DenverInfill bloggers will once again be leading a 1-hour walking tour of the Union Station project this Saturday, October 30 for anyone that's interested.

The tour will start at 10 AM (meet at about 9:50 AM in front of the station at 17th and Wynkoop) and will end at 11 AM at the Millennium Bridge. Cost is $10 (cash only please) and all proceeds go to the non-profit Union Station Advocates.

The forecast says Saturday morning's weather will be beautiful, so join us at Union Station for a tour!